

Public And Private Company Finance:

5 Great Ways To Increase Funding And Boost Revenues.

Most Canadian companies seek financing through a bank line of credit...a factoring service...invoice discount facility... or a combination thereof.

The problem is that these facilities often discount the value of inventory, assets, and revenues by 50% or more...and come with covenant-restrictions that hinder growth and limit cash-flow.

Experts think now could be the best time in history to re-negotiate lending covenants and increase funding.

Canadian banks are becoming more selective with their debt capital.

Acquisition & Growth:

3. Buyout the competition

Acquisitions can be one of the most complex areas of finance in Canadian commercial banking. Leverage current revenues to buy your competitors assets...operations...and customer book with 100% of the financing you need — domestic and overseas.

4. Open an office in the U.S. or overseas.

Move inventory closer to your best foreign buyers and be the “go to” supplier for your products and services — New government rule allows chartered banks to provide the extra working capital you need by valuing your foreign domiciled inventory as though it were based in Canada.

New advances in finance give Canadian companies more options.

Fortunately, new finance solutions provide Canadian companies with powerful new opportunities to:

1. Increase your monthly borrowing base

And get more lending value out of your current inventory, including finished product, and get more capital to increase production... win more contracts...and open a U.S. or overseas office.

2. Offer 100% financing to buyers

Collect payment now and not 90-120 days later. This finance tool allows you to offer your buyers long-term credit to buy more of your product... boost sales...and increase cash flow.

Non-equity finance transforms the way Canadian companies access capital for growth via acquisitions and foreign expansion.

Local lines of credit much easier to access for Canadian subsidiaries.

International Banking:

5. Get a local line of credit for any non-Canadian subsidiary

Conversely, the same tool that allows you to open an overseas office... or acquire a foreign competitor...incentivizes foreign banks to provide your Canadian subsidiary with a working capital line of credit. This is a game-changer, because foreign buyers will now view your company as a “local business partner” with full payment and credit facilities located domestically for them.

And much more...

The bottom line is Canadian banks want to help companies get access to the funds they need to expand, grow, and generate more profits...but more often than not their hands are tied by old rules... new regulations... and increasingly difficult oversight committees. That's why they often reach out to us.
